But Who Has His Bag?

Rep. Barry Goldwater Jr., R-Calif., recently spent a short time somewhere near Camarillo, Calif., going through the underwear of George Bush, director of the CIA. Bush was not there at the time. Junior held a press conference to report he had accidentally grabbed Bush's suitcase after they both landed at Los Angeles International Airport at the same time after a flight from Washington. "It turns out," the congressman said, "that we have the same identical suitcases. I saw what I thought was mine and just grabbed it and left. I didn't realize it until this morning when I looked for my shaving kit." He did not know if Bush had grabbed his suitcase or how a CIA director, of all people, could lose his suitcase. He did not know if Bush, new in the job, felt the embarrassment a spy feels when he loses his underwear. He did know that Bush "packs very neatly" and we never knew that about Dulles, or Helms or Colby or, come to think of it, Mata Hari.
